Groundbreaking Transportation Summit to be Held in Long Beach

Sacramento, CA - The California Association for Coordinated Transportation (CalACT) will be presenting the 2007 National Summit on Transportation. The three-day convention will focus on some of the most important and challenging issues facing members of the transportation industry today. The conference is expected to attract transportation professionals from around the nation.

Renowned transportation industry leaders, influential private sector businesspersons, government officials, and labor representatives will speak on topics including worldwide climate change trends, current and forecasted energy dependence, and a growing senior population – all of which have significant impacts on the way people currently travel.

Keynote speakers including former Bogotá mayor Enrique Peñalosa; James Simpson, FTA Administrator; APTA President, Bill Millar; and former San Francisco mayor, Willie Brown will converge with transportation professionals to gather unique ideas for innovation and adaptation.

Held in Long Beach, California, September 12 through September 14, 2007, the Speed of Life Transportation Summit will feature engaging presentations, panel discussions, complimentary meals, and an evening networking reception. Persons interested in attending this groundbreaking event are encouraged to visit www.calact.org for registration and agenda collateral.

CalACT is a statewide, non-profit, organization representing the interests of small, rural, and specialized transportation providers since 1984. Its 300-person membership is comprised of transit operators, planning and government agencies, social service agencies, vendors, and consultants.
